

Parent carer information sheet – survey for SEN Units and Resourced Provision

This survey is run by the Department for Education (DfE) and is intended to gather views from parents and carers who have or have had a child attending a SEN unit or resourced provision, or a school's own unit for SEND provision.

What do we mean by SEN unit or resourced provision?

SEN units or resourced provision are SEND provisions within mainstream schools which are commissioned by the Local Authority. Admissions for these units are generally done through the Local Authority via the Education, Health and Care Plan (EHCP) process, whereas school's own units typically have no Local Authority involvement and support pupils already on the school's roll (who may or may not have EHCPs). For the purposes of this survey we will refer to both LA and schools provisions collectively as 'bases'.

Why are we running this research?

The Department for Education, part of the UK government, is running this research to learn what parents and carers think about the bases that their children receive SEND support from at their mainstream school.

We will write a report with the information we collect which may be published externally. Your name and your school's name will not be included in the report, and you will not be able to tell who responded to our survey from the report. It is anonymous.
